HEALTHFUL BREAD

Army Uses 400 Tons of Flour Per Month

In Making Bread Just as Good as Mother's.

BY V. A. LAMBERT.

(From French and Camp.)

"Oh, Mrs. Brown, I had splendid luck with my bread this time. It is just wonderful, and I got seven loaves from this batch."

Many times have we heard this little remark pass between the kitchens of our neighbors, in praise of the result of their baking, and then follows a lengthy detail of all the ingredients, preparation, working and the final triumph which netted "so many" loaves.

The regulations which have been laid down through the necessity of using substitutes in the various home cooked foods, especially bread, during the war, have given the housewife a just reason and right to proclaim her victories achieved in baking. To actually get results, is of vital interest to her even if obtained from the neighbor or the cook book. The proof is in the eating and it is here that the thoughts are turned to "her boy" who used to ask for bread and butter at frequent intervals during his play hours, and wonder what kind of bread he is getting in the army.

Wholemeal Bread.

This is easily answered, in as many words. The bread which the army is serving to its boys is good, wholesome, muscle building, eatable bread. Every article used in its making is of the very best grade obtainable.

The bakery is a huge, ever-moving cogwheel in the camp machinery of activity. With a personnel of 101 men, it not only is busy preparing the many loaves of bread for the entire camp, but it is also teaching men the art of making good, wholesome bread, so that upon their return to commercial life they will have acquired a trade that is in demand. The flour which is being consumed amounts to 400,000 pounds per month. From these 400 tons of flour, approximately 400,000 loaves of bread are obtained, each loaf weighing two pounds. Turning out bread at this rate would bring the figure to 13,333 loaves a day. Take the daily output and slice it for table use would be a nice little task to perform if left for a few individuals to do, but instead the bread is sliced in each mess hall by its K. P.'s (kitchen police) just before each meal. By doing this there is just enough bread cut, but plenty for all, without having any left over for the next "mess." Sometimes, but not very often, crusts of bread will accumulate and it is on these occasions that the soldiers get a different form of pudding. It is known as bread pudding. It is a combination of raisins, apples and bread covered with a sweet lemon sauce.

Similar to Home Made.

The bread in the making is similar to that which is made at home. The work is conducted along similar lines, using the articles and practically the same proportions, but, of course, in greater quantity. Instead of a small yeast cake, the government gets its yeast supply, some 3,200 lbs., made up of one pound cartons, each month. Along with the yeast, a product which has been satisfactorily tested in various universities and by the government, is used which diminishes the amount of yeast, sugar and flour. It is also a valuable asset in the dough in assisting the bread to rise and gives a more nutritious element to the ingredients in eating.

Batches of bread are made up at 20 minute intervals, according to the amount of bread to be baked. These "batches" are mixed by a machine and then placed in long troughs for rising. This takes eight hours. A room is especially arranged for this work, it being steam heated and kept to a normal temperature. From this room, after being worked and "punched" the bread is taken over to the oven. The ovens are of standard make the same as used in all large bakeries in the cities.

Use Field Equipment.

In connection with the making of bread, the men are taught the use of field equipment and conditions experienced under such circumstances. The field unit has its men, supplies, tent and utensils for baking. The time it takes to set up a field unit, and the necessary work to be done, from the time the unloading from the wagon starts to the completion of the operation requires forty-five minutes. In this short time a hole, about five feet deep and as much in diameter, is dug for the fire box, the oven, which is portable, is set up in place, the tent pitched, supplies placed, utensils unpacked and fire started. The oven has three divisions for the bread, one above the other. Instead of a solid square oven it is a "take down" for easy transportation. It is all clamped together with small thumb screws, which takes four minutes and ten seconds to set up and two and a half minutes to take down. When it comes to "making time" as well as making bread, the boys are equally efficient.

Learn It in Two Weeks.

A great many men were placed in the bakery who have never had any knowledge or experience in bread making, but with thirty per cent experienced bakers, these men in two weeks' time become efficient bakers. This does not mean that the men became bakers in that length of time, but simply that in this short period they have become an assistant baker. This does not mean that the men became bakers in that length of time, but simply that in this short period they have become an assistant baker. This does not mean that the men became bakers in that length of time, but simply that in this short period they have become an assistant baker.

Use Substitutes in Army.

The soldiers do not get white bread all the time. The substitutes which the civilians have had to learn to use, since this country entered the war, have also been used in army bread. The substitute products used have been corn meal, white and yellow oat meal, rye and some barley. Fifteen per cent of the bread made is composed of substitutes, and every one of them are of the most healthful nutritious grain that can be used to make a man "physically fit."

When it comes to the baking, this part of bread making is as carefully done as in the mixing, setting or punching. The loaves are not burned nor are they underbaked. The time for a thorough baking takes one hour and ten minutes and when taken from the oven has a crispy, mellow crust that easily melts in the mouth, and the center is light equally baked, all of which assists in making the bread easily digested.

In summing up the bread that "the boys" are getting, is that it may not be "home made," it may not be mother's bread, but after a long three-some drill or in light lunch, a thick slice of it tastes "just as good as mother's."

FINISH THE JOB

That Will Be Fifth Liberty Loan Slogan.

Meeting of Directors Is Held at Atlantic City.

Atlantic City, N. J., Dec. 13.—"Let's finish the job," will be the slogan for the fifth liberty loan, it was announced here today.

The decision was reached at the national meeting of publicity and sales directors who will aid in the next war loan campaign.

The possibility of a greater Serbia coming into being through the amalgamation of all the transatlantic territories populated by Slavs is regarded by many Italians as a national menace.

Italy wishes to unite all those of Italian blood under the rule of Rome and this has given rise to the irreducible problem. But, a union of the unresolving Slavs, unless there is an international power, is not in keeping with Italy's future desires.

The peace conference will be compelled to settle this question by a decision that can not please both the Italians and the Serbs.

Disappointment will remain to one side or the other as a possible basis for future classes of interest. The rivalry along the Adriatic may easily imperil peace in the years ahead, unless there is an international power to which appeal could be taken.

VIEWS ON WORLD NEWS

By J. W. T. Mason, United Press Expert.

New York, Dec. 13.—Differences are developing between Italy and the Jugo-Slavs, due to Italy's desire to make her own interests paramount in the Adriatic and to spread Italian influence over the Adriatic's eastern shore.

The Jugo-Slavs want to form an independent state along the eastern Adriatic which might be expanded into a great Slav commonwealth thru the union of Jugo-Slavs with Montenegro and Serbia. Italy does not look with favor on the creation of a Slav neighbor so powerful as this. The Italians have always longed for control of both shores of the Adriatic, and have never taken kindly to any proposal for permitting Serbia to reach the sea anywhere along the Adriatic.

The possibility of a greater Serbia coming into being through the amalgamation of all the transatlantic territories populated by Slavs is regarded by many Italians as a national menace. Italy wishes to unite all those of Italian blood under the rule of Rome and this has given rise to the irreducible problem.
